

I don't know where the greed of the big media and broadcasting companies (led by the NAB in this case) is going to stop. But even if the FCC and Congress have so often caved in (or at least tried to cave in) to big money interests, I would hope that you would have a care for successful technological innovation and for the interest of people like me who live in places where radio reception is too weak and cable too expensive. Finally, after many years, I have an affordable way to listen to good music (blessedly without constant commercial interruption) with a quality signal and up-to-date weather and traffic information.

Apparently, that is a threat to the big broadcasters with their dozens of stations in markets all over the country.

Surely the House Energy and Commerce Committee could find some issues that they can pursue without stifling competition at the beck and call of monied interests.

Please deny the NAB's Petition 04-160.
